Remdesivir Officially Out

Remember a few months back when Gilead's medicine remdesivir appeared to be showing positive results in early stages of experimental COVID-19 treatments? Well, the WHO has officially announced that its use doesn't appear to help much at all, in fact. For this very reason, the WHO has concluded that the drug never be used to treat symptoms of COVID-19.

New AIDS Medication Gives Patients Their Time Back

While scientific research and social awareness of AIDS has certainly come a long way in the last several decades, much lies ahead to improve care and medical treatment. Medications for prevention and treatment have continued to improve, but many require daily consumption, causing patient fatigue. However, a new path towards medicines with the power to last longer appears to now be a possibility with Cabenuva, a once-a-month injection.

More and More Pharmaceuticals Announce Vaccines

Major players in big pharma have begun to announce the results of the third phase of their clinical trials for a SARS-CoV-2 vaccine. In the United States, the first companies to apply for FDA approval are Pfizer and BioNTech, who claim 95% effectiveness. As well, expecting full results in December is Oxford-Astrazeneca. In China as well there appear to be companies touting success over 1 million patients.

Is the Paris Agreement Back on the US?

President-elect Joe Biden had promised to rejoin the Paris Agreement on environmental regulation and preventative action upon entering the White House in January. And while this sounds like good news for Mother Earth, the reality of the Paris Agreement is that some countries do not appear on track to reach the preset goals.
